VI. PRIMA FACIE JURISDICTION

10. Both parties did not submit observations on the prima facie jurisdiction of the Court.

11. When it is seized of an application, the Court shall make a preliminary examination of its jurisdiction on the basis of Articles 3, 5(3) and 34(6) of the Protocol.

12. Article 3(1) of the Protocol provides that:

The jurisdiction of the Court shall extend to all cases and disputes submitted to it concerning the interpretation and application of the Charter, this Protocol and any other relevant Human Rights instrument ratified by the States concerned.

13. Rule 49(1) of the Rules provides “the Court shall preliminary ascertain its jurisdiction...in accordance with the Charter, the Protocol and these Rules.” However, in ordering provisional measures, the Court need not ascertain that it has jurisdiction on the merits of the Case, but it simply needs to satisfy itself that it has prima facie jurisdiction.¹

accepting the jurisdiction of the Court to receive application from individuals and non-governmental organizations in accordance with Article 34(6) of the Protocol read together with Article 5(3) thereof.

16. In the instant case, the rights claimed by the Applicant to have been violated are protected by the Charter, instrument that the Court is empowered to interpret and apply pursuant to Article 3(1) of the Protocol.

17. In light of the foregoing, the Court, notes that it has prima facie jurisdiction to hear to hear the requests for provisional measures.

VII. PROVISIONAL MEASURES REQUESTED

18. Under provisional measures, the Applicant prays the Court to:

Order the Respondent State, through the Independent Elections Authority, to refrain from holding the legislative elections scheduled for 17 December 2022, the said legislative elections being based on Decree No. 55 which is unconstitutional and contrary to the international instruments ratified by the Respondent State, and to order the Respondent State not to hold the said elections until the Constitutional Court has been established.

19. The Court recalls that Article 27(2) of the Protocol provides:

In cases of extreme gravity and urgency, and when necessary to avoid irreparable harm to persons, the Court shall adopt such provisional measures as it deems necessary.

20. The Court notes that Rule 59(1) of the Rules provide:

Pursuant to Article 27(2) of the Protocol, the Court may, at the request of a party, or on its own accord, in case of extreme gravity and urgency and where necessary to avoid irreparable harm to persons, adopt such provisional measures as it deems necessary, pending determination of the main Application.

21. It follows from the foregoing that the Court has the discretion to decide in each case whether to exercise the power vested in it by virtue of the aforementioned provisions in light of the particular circumstances.

22. The court recalls that urgency, which is consubstantial with extreme gravity, means that an "irreparable and imminent risk will be caused before it renders its final judgment"².

23. The Court notes that the risk in question must be real, should exclude the purely hypothetical risk, and should explain the need to remedy it in the immediate future³.

24. With respect to irreparable harm, the Court considers that there must be a "reasonable probability of its occurrence" having regard to the context and the Applicant's personal situation.⁴

25. In view of the above-mentioned provisions, the Court takes into account the nature of the standard practices as regards the procedures for examining and deciding on requests for provisional measures, which rules are of a preventive nature and do not preclude a decision on the merits of the Application.⁵

26. The Court will now consider the Applicant's request to postpone the parliamentary elections scheduled for December 2022.

i. Injunction on the legislative elections scheduled for December 2022

27. The Applicant requests the Court to order the Respondent State, through the Independent Superior Electoral Authority (ISIE), to suspend the legislative elections scheduled for 17 December 2022, in accordance with Decree No. 55 of 2022. The Applicant argues that since the said Decree is unconstitutional and contrary to the international instruments ratified by the Respondent State, the ISIE is enjoined to refuse to supervise any elections prior to the establishment of the Constitutional Court.

28. The Court notes that this application seeks the Court to order the respondent State to postpone the parliamentary elections scheduled for 17 December 2022, to elect the members of the Assembly of People's Representatives.

29. The Court notes that the Applicant filed his application with the Registry on 21 October 2022. He refers to the two decree-laws No. 44 and No. 55 of 2022 of 13 and 15 September 2022 relating respectively to the fight against offences relating to information and communication systems and the amendment of the organic law No. 2014-16 of 26 May 2014 on elections and referendum.

30. The Court notes that the Applicant has not shown any direct link between the date of the calling of the parliamentary elections and the decree which is the subject of his application. Furthermore, the prayers for provisional measures are the same as those in the main application.

31. The Court observes that, in order to establish the existence of harm which the request for provisional measures seeks to avoid, it is necessary to determine a connection between the measures requested and the merits of the case. The Court notes in this respect that there is no connection between the request for a stay of the election concerned and the rights alleged by the Applicant in the Application instituting proceedings. Indeed, the alleged violations are not alleged in the context of the election whose suspension is sought.

32. Therefore, the Court rejects the Applicant's request for an order to suspend the organisation of the concerned election.

33. For the avoidance of doubt, the Court recalls that this Ruling is provisional and in no way prejudices the Court's findings on its jurisdiction, on the admissibility of the application and on the merits thereof.

VIII. OPERATIVE PART

34. For these reasons,

THE COURT,

By a vote of Nine (9) for, and One (1) against, Judge Chafika BENSAOULA dissenting,

Dismisses the request to order the respondent State to postpone the holding of the parliamentary elections scheduled for 17 December 2022 until the Court can examine the merits of the case.
